Huge Crowd at Dock Scrambles To Get Glimpse of Dr. Crippen.

AGONY OF SUSPENSE OVER

Alleged Murderer and Woman Sleep Well After Nearly Collapsing on Board.

Captain Kendall of the Montrose Tells How He Discovered the Identity of His Passengers.

Quebec. Aug. 1.—Canadian justice wed swiftly today in the case of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and Ethel Clare Leneve, who, charged with "guilty knowledge of an abominable crime, fed from the other side of the Atlantic only to be caught in a police trap before they could put foot on the soil of the dominion.

The steamer Montrose on which the fugitives were arrested yesterday while the vessel was still 160 miles from this port, arrived at her pier here at 1:56 o'clock this morning. The prisoners were hastened through an enormous crowd of curious ones to the provincial jail, where they were placed in separate cells for the night.

Here they got a few hours' sleep, the est rest either had had since they fed from London on July 9, shortly before detectives found in the cellar of the Crippen home the bits of human flesh, which the authorities have tried to essablish once went to make up the body of Belle Elmore, Crippen's wife.

Today both prisoners appeared refreshed. The agony of suspense over, they had fallen into that deep sleep that betokens physical exhaustion.
As soon as the arrests were made the local court authorities were notified and Judge Panet Angers had arranged and Judge Panet Angers had arranged to hold court at 10:30 o'clock this morn-ing. The accused were held under the ing. The accused were held under the law pertaining to fugitives suspected of connection with crime and the court proceedings were arranged to be conducted expeditiously. It is hoped that crippen and his typist can be sent tast to London on the steamer Royal deerge, which will sall on Thursday. Resever, under the fugitive offending at the prisoners have the right to remain here 15 days before their departure. This period affords them opportunity to seek release through habeas carpus proceedings. Crippen may also stroke his right as an American citiservise his right as an American citi-se to appeal to the American consul-bre and so make sure that his rights are not infringed. It is doubtful if Crippen avails himself of either chance

As the night advanced the crowd grew greater. The police found difficulty in restraining the curious. The steamer was sighted down the harbor. The excitement was intense. When the boat swung into her pier, Crippen was still in cabin No. 8, where he was confined yesterday. With him was Detective Denis. Miss Leneve was under close watch of Chief McCarthy in cabin No. 5. Throughout the night Inspector Dew had passed from one cabin to the other, not for one moment relaxing the watch on the prisoners who once slipped through his fingers.

A half hour before the landing the prisoners were told that they were the grates.

Both had nearing Quebec. Both had been under the greatest strain for hours and showed increased restlessness. Crippen, who had been attempting to read a novel, tossed the book aside and dropped his head in his hands in the same despairing attitude that he assumed yesterday forenoon when he heard the fateful words: "In the name of the king, I arrest you."

At the same time Miss Leneve in her quarters in another part of the vessel, tall on her knees and gazed out of the parthole into the blackness of the hight. Suddenly she turned back into be room and was seized with a fit of oughing.

It was a nervous cough that racked be and the nerves of her guard who had attended her from the time she collapsed following her arrest.

EMERGE FROM CABINS.

At 19:39 o'clock Capt. Kendall came down the bridge and notified Inspector Dew that in a few minutes his passenters would be taken ashore. Dew notified McCarthy and Denis. Presently Denis emerged from the cabin door with Crippen, whom he held by the atm as they passed both main cabins in a roundabout direction.

Crippen, his face white as death, walked in with a shambling gait. As they passed the state-room which the doctor formerly had occupied with Miss Leneve, the door of that room swung seen and Detective McCarthy half carried Miss Leneve out to the passage-say.

Both prisoners were seen and the passage-say.

After these experiments I was convinced.

"Crippen was very wary in his talk with me. Several times I conversed with him in the cabin, but always I was careful to ask him no questions that would excite his suspicions. Up to the hour of his arrest I believe that he did note dream how sure we were of their identity."

Point loomed in the distance yesterday afternoon, he was careful to prepare Crippen for the arrival of the river pilot. Crippen and Miss Leneve had risen early and breakfasted together at 6 o'clock. Then Miss Leneve complained of a slight indisposition and retired to her stateroom. Crippen went on deck to watch for the pilot boat. When it appeared, carrying four men all in pilot garb, the fugitive turned suddenly to Dr. Stewart, the ship's physician and, eyeing the other searchingly, said:

CRIPPEN SUSPICIOUS.

"There seem to be too many pilots on board. I see four." Stewart, who had been instructed not to leave Crippen's side until the arrest Crippen remained hanging over the rail near the companionway as the tender of the pilotboat with the police officials paddled alogside. Inspector Dew, Chief McCarthy and Detective Denis of the provincial police, were made up in an attempt to look like the fourth occupant of the beat, the real pilot. Dew, however, did not make a good pilot and his disguise was hardly more effective than that of his quarry. The English officer could not clamber up the rope ladder with a sailor's agility, and he all but upset the little boat when he left it.

The denouement was simple enough. The recognition between Dew and Crippen was mutual and immediate.

When he reached the companionway

When he reached the companionwand at last faced the man whom hong had sought, the inspector said:
"Are you Dr. Crippen?"

Dew continued: "You are arrested on the charge of murder and mutilation of an unknown woman." quoting from the first sentence of the warrant which was later formally read by Chief Mc-Carthy, when the prisoner had ac-companied his centers into cable No.

The first exchanges over, Dew nod-ded to McCarthy and the latter clap-ped a pair of handcuffs on Crippen's wrists. The prisoner made no resist-ance. In fact, h. appeared relieved and as he turned in the direction in-dicated, by the officers, said:
"I am glad. The suspense was too great."

In the two-berth room into which he was conducted. Crippen flung himself into a steamer chair and buried his face in his hands. McCarthy remained Crippen wore no spectacles aboard. Here is the result: You can see how closely it resembles the man as he looks today. And here is something else I did."

The skipper took from his desk a square of white cardboard with a round hole cut in the center, and fitted it over a newspaper cut of Miss Leneve Thus superimposed it covered the girl's picture-hat and dress, leaving only the face showing. "I did this and compared the pictured face with that of the passenger Crippen said was his son," said Kendall. "The resemblance is striking. After these experiments I was convinced. As they appeared on the gangplank and caught sight of the enormous

As they appeared on the gangplank and caught sight of the enormous crowd that surged about the pier, desperately determined to get a glimpse at the pair, Crippen and the woman would have fallen but for the arms which supported them.

Crippen's manacled hands swung loosely in front of him. Miss Leneve swayed from side to side. Her closely cut hair still gave her the boyish appearance which she had tried to adopt and many of the crowd were fooled into thinking that the diminutive figure was not that of the woman who had challenged the attention of two continents and believed the police were using a little boy disguised as a woman to distract the attention of the crowd and so give them opportunity to remove the real prisoner with less inconvenience. The little procession had scarcely reached the foot of the gangplank when the pushing crowd closed in around it and it was only after the police had charged that they were able to make a passage to the cab that was waiting just outside the pier shed.

STRUGGLE WITH CROWD.

STRUGGLE WITH CROWD

STRUGGLE WITH CROWD.

When the officers found an opening they half carried their charges to the carriage, pushed them inside and in another moment the vehicle was clattering along the wooden floor of the pier and out into the narrow street that led to the provincial buildings.

The floor of the provincial jail stood open, waiting its new guests and the formalities necessary were quickly over. Crippen was placed in a cell smaller than the stateroom which he and his typist had occupied on the smaller than the stateroom which he and his typist had occupied on the Montrose. More consideration was shown to Miss Leneve. She was given a large and comparatively comfortable room on an upper floor. This room had been fitted up for the occupation of a scrubwoman employed in the iail. It was at the request of cupation of a scrubwoman employed in the jail. It was at the request of this humble servant of the public that this room, better than any provided for prisoners, was given to the little woman who for love of a man has found herself a fugitive from justice. The act appears to be typical of the feeling prevailing here among a large part of Quebec's population today. The public refuses to put the woman in the same class with the man.

CROWD OUTSIDE JAIL.

Early today throngs gathered outside the jail in anticipation of the appearance of the prisoners in court. Next to the accused, the object of the greatest public attention is inspector Dew. The latter wore an air this morning not noticeable before. The successful conclusion of his mission has put a new light in his face.

Nevertheless the Scotland Yard man knows that a great responsibility still rests on him. His prisoners have been caught but they are yet to be safely returned to London. It is generally believed that Dew has falled to secure the hoped-for confession. While his immediate duty was to get his man to have obtained a confession would have been a feather in the cap of any officer.

Inst how much Crippen knows of the officer.

Just how much Crippen knows of the case against him is in doubt. Whether he has learned that the British authorities have been unable to identify the dismembered body found in the cellar of his Hilldrop Crescent home as that of his actress wife is not known. Without such identification lawyers say a conviction may be impossible.

Dew has said that Crippen was a coward. Dew, however, has been mistaken about Crippen before now, He was mistaken when he accepted Crippen's promise to remain in London.

Another hero today is Capt. Kendail of the Montrose, who discovered the identity of the suspects after they had

I bought all the papers and used to lie in my bunk and read them. But the government has a tidy little fight on its hands in its effort to do so. King Alfonso is a progressive, all right, but the queenmother is a reactionary and she wields a powerful influence."

DR. CRIPPEN IS ARRAIGNED

Announced He Would Not Resist His Extradition to England.

ETHEL LENEVE NOT PRESENT

Custodian Reported to Court She Was Too III to Appear.

Taken From Jail to Hospital-Inspector Dew Got Instructions Changing Program.

Quebec, Aug. 1.-Dr. Hawley H. Crippen announced in the provincial court today that he would not resist his return to England to stand trial for the murder of a woman believed by the po lice to be his missing wife, Beile Elmore, the American actress. Crippen's companion in flight, Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, was to have been arraigned today, but her custodians reported to the court that she was too ill to appear.

The authorities are confident that the voman will give no more trouble than Crippen promises to, and that as soon as the 15 days of grace provided by the extradition laws of Canada have expired the prisoners can be returned to London without any hitch.

When Crippen and Miss Leneve were arrested on board the steamer Montrose yesterday they were charged with identical crimes, the murder and mutilation of an unknown woman. It had been expected that both would be arraigned at 10:30 o'clock this morning and deported on the steamer Royal George, that will sail for England Thursday. However, Inspector Dew received instructions which change the program.

NO RAILROADING.

The English officials do not wish anything done that would give the appear-thing done that would give the appearance of "railroading" the prisoners. They wish the formalities of extradition followed to the letter.

When this became known the arraignment of the accused was delayed until a new plan of procedure could be mapped out. It was finally determined to bring the prisoners before the court as fugitives from justice and to set a later date at which they might make any proper protests against their extradition. In the meantime it is supposed they will be permitted to have counsel.

The girl's family in London appears to be doing all possible to aid her, and at the same time promote the cause of justice. During the day she received three cablegrams from her relatives. One of these urged her to tell everything and another besought her to remember her own family no matter how great might be her love for Crippen.

CRIPPEN ANSWERS QUESTIONS.

It was a broken man that stood before Judge Angers in the provincial court of special sessions. In a voice so weak that it scarcely reached the bench he answered the formal questions put to him. The proceedings were brief, and at their conclusion the prisoner was remanded for 15 days instead of until Aug. 8, and at the expiration of that time he will be sent back to England unless meantime he decides to England unless meantime he decides to fight extradition.

Following the receipt of instructions from Scotland Yard today, Inspector Dew visited the court house and conferred for some moments with the judge. Then he held a whispered conference with the Canadian detectives, after which the latter hurried away to the jail. A report that they had gone after Crippen filtered through the mass of humanity that extended in every direction from the palais de justice high on the historic plains of Abraham.

Presently the detectives with Crippen drove up to the courthouse in a carriage and fought their way through the crowd to the judge's chambers. Crippen was brought at once to the bar. He was heavily manacled. It was apparent that he had passed a bad night.

"Are you ready to go back with him or any qualified officer?" 'Do you intend to fight extradition?"

"No."
As he answered the questions Crippen scarcely raised his head.
To further interrogatives he said he was a citizen of the United States, born in Michigan.
When the judge asked:
"Is the girl arrested with you Miss Ethel Clare Leneve?" the doctor re-

"Yes."

The proceedings were under the fugitive offenders' law that obtains between British possessions. Judge Langeller explained today that under this statute as soon as the attorney-general of the province of Quebec was notified by cable that a warrant had been issued in London he instructed Judge Angers to issue a provisional warrant for the arrest of the suspects on the Montrose.

on the Montrose The examination today was conducted by Judge Langelier who sits on the bench with Judge Angers.
